Brief Comment	I have been involved in emergency communications for more than forty years. From delivering severe weather information on radio and television to helping disseminate search and rescue information. I know that the CAE (Amber Alert) Code has been proven to assist first responders in locating children and thus, saving lives. I believe the establishment of an EAS code for Missing and Endangered adults will produce the same results. Obviously various reporting authorities will have unique situations affecting the procedures for use such as geography, population density, cultural aspects, and intertwined jurisdictions, but having this code as an option will provide one more tool to help save lives.
